BOGARDUS DESCRIBED BY GOODY DEED

Went to Copeland's to Borrow Money but Being Refused Struck Down the Old Man—Arguments in Case Completed and Judge will Charge Jury this Morning—Jurass to be Tried for Murder Next.

The evidence and arguments in the trial of John Bogardus, charged with murder in the first degree, were completed in the criminal superior court here on Thursday and Judge Wheeler will charge the jury this morning.
The accused was the only witness for the defense, and he told of killing Jurass Copeland, although it was not premeditated. He sought to secure some money from Copeland, and was refused, after which he struck him down with the iron bar.

Coroner Brown Finished.

When the court opened on Thursday morning Coroner F. H. Brown was recalled and completed his testimony regarding his investigation. He said he told Bogardus what Edith West and Kelley had said, after which Bo-gardus said: "I killed Dyer Copeland; I am guilty," after which he told it in detail.

The coroner told of going to the Copeland barn and finding the bar covered with blood and described the

JOHN BOGARDUS.

location. On cross-examination the coroner said the first examination of Bogardus was September 10 at the New London police station. He did not know Bogardus had been arrested and liberated by the police. There was no promise of leniency made to Bo-gardus and Labor made his confession freely. He did not say he went to borrow money of Copeland but said he took his purse. After telling that he killed Copeland, Bogardus did not want to talk any more.

Dr. H. A. Rogers of New London told of examining the blood and hair on the bar. The hair, he said, was that of a horse. He was not cross-examined.

Bogardus Tells His Story.

After being allowed ten minutes for consultation, the attorneys called John Bogardus, and every eye in the room was centered on the prisoner, who walked deliberately to the witness stand and told his story in a matter of fact sort of a way, his unflinching nature attesting the ordeal with marked coolness.

Bogardus testified that he was born in Flahill, N. Y., 23 years ago. He went to work when sixteen and was employed by a florist, stable keeper, and another florist after which he worked in New York and then at Beach Haven, Pa., in a brickyard with his father. Returning to Flahill and working a short time he joined the army, being sent to Fort Trumbull in 1906. In New London he was a chum of Kelley. During the first week in September he had been drinking much and on Labor day, which was a holiday at the fort, he drank in four New London saloons with Kelley. He had of that day a check for him for three days off. He knew Copeland as a man who sold clothes to the soldiers. The accused testified that he told Kelley he was going over to Copeland to borrow some money and said he had sold Copeland a suit of clothes.

MOULTON HAS CASE

Goes Over Two Weeks Under $500 Bonds—Never Had Account in Own Name.

Although a continuance was granted Thursday in the New Haven city court in the case of John P. Moulton, who is charged with making and uttering fraudulent checks in New Haven, at the request of Judge Mithewson the evidence of the state's witnesses was presented, so that those who were from out of town would not have to appear again.

Edward B. Eames, a broker, who cashed two checks of $10 and $50 respectively for the accused, stated that he had been acquainted with Moulton for the past six months, and that on Jan. 25 he cashed a check for him for $10, and the day following for $50. The first one was cashed in the Hotel Davenport, where Moulton was staying, and to which place he had summoned the witness by telephone. The checks were drawn by the Thames Loan and Trust Co. of Norwich.

Martin Richmond, of Richmond & Bno, proprietors of the Palm barber shop, said that he accepted a check the accused offered drawn on the same company for the sum of $20 in payment for work done in the tonsorial line, and gave him the change. The check was returned as bad.

Dwight L. Underwood, assistant treasurer of the Thames Loan and Trust Co. of Norwich, took the witness stand and said that the accused at the order of his wife had been allowed to draw checks on his company, but that the wife's account with the company had been discontinued last March. He also stated that the accused never of his own had an account with the company.

Judge Levi N. Blydenburg, who represented the accused in asking the court to fix a bond, stated that the defense of the accused would be that he did not draw checks with intent to defraud, but that he supposed there was money enough in the bank to cover the amounts. He concluded by saying that the continuance of two weeks would show that the persons who received the checks would not suffer any financial loss on account thereof.

Assistant City Attorney Lemuel replied by saying that it was not at all improbable that other counts might be filed against Moulton, as the evidence in his possession was such that it might support them. The bond was fixed at $500.

Moulton was formerly a grocery clerk here. He married Miss Mary Baker, niece of the late Dr. Beckwith of New Haven.

Rehearsing for Play.

By the regular social programme for the Halle club, Thursday evening should have been the monthly evening at cards for the members, but it was postponed this time in order to make time for rehearsals for The Garden Party. The others of the club's weekly social nights are also to be postponed until after the play has been given.

Kelley had supper with him at the fort, and they went to the Copeland premises. The accused went in, Kelley remaining outside, somewhere. Mr. Copeland was found between the barn and the house and was asked for a loan of $2, which he refused. Bogardus followed him into the barn, but he refused again there upon being asked again. He said the soldiers owed him money and he told Bogardus to go out and called him a vile name. Bogardus got excited and grabbing the iron bar, struck the old man over the head with it, knocking him down, and struck him several more times, after which he went through the pockets, taking his purse in which he thought was about $7.

Bogardus met Kelley after that and told him of killing the old man and getting his money. He told of giving Kelley some money and the disposition of the pocketbook.

Denied Some of Kelley's Statements.
Bogardus related the washing off of the blood from his trousers and face, and of meeting Edith West and his arrest later. He said he had no idea of killing the old man. He became enraged and excited in the barn, and as he had been drinking much, could remember but little of what happened.
IN denied that he told Kelley that he was going for a dagger under the haystack, or that he asked him to go with him and hit the old man over the head.
He said that he did not tell Kelley that he had killed any other man.

Severe Cross-Examination.

State's Attorney Hull cross-examined Bogardus, and the accused could not tell how he remembered he owed for beer but could not remember many of the details about the killing. He could not tell how many times he hit the old man. He said he could not remember when asked to show with the iron bar how he struck Copeland. Jabbing the floor three times with the pointed end of the iron bar, State's Attorney Hull asked him if that was the way he struck Copeland, but witness said he could not remember. He could not remember how he went through the old man's pockets, or whether his face and hands were bloody. He said he was mean the iron bar when he said he was going to find the dagger. He could not tell how he found the bar. He denied saying that he would kill Kelley if he told, and could not tell why he told Edith West to look the way to money at 121 Main street. He denied telling Kelley to say they were at 151 Main street. He denied telling Kelley that he put his hand on Copeland's head and one of the soldiers said: "Good boy, Johnny."

This completed the evidence and both sides rested. After a short recess the arguments were commenced, and concluded during the afternoon, State's Attorney Hull closing at 2:50 o'clock. Attorney Whittlesby opened for the state, and was followed by Attorneys Geary and Smith, State's Attorney Hull closing. There was a short recess then, and when the jury was called in Judge Wheeler stated that owing to the lateness of the hour and desiring to hasten a verdict in such a case, to had, after a conference with the attorneys, decided to dismiss them until 10 o'clock this morning, which he did.

Monsain to Plead Guilty.

Mathias Monsain, who is charged with burglary in Salem and who is to plead guilty, was presented before the court upon order of the state's attorney and was put to plea, but it was found he did not understand English, and it was necessary to postpone the matter until this morning, when a German interpreter will be present.

Jurass Murder Trial Next.

On Thursday John Jurass, who is charged with assisting in the murder of a woman in North Lyme, was brought here from New London, and was in the dock during the afternoon.
He is to be tried next. An extra panel of state's jurors was drawn in the afternoon, and Sheriff Brown sent his men out to summons them in today, the selection of a jury to be made while the Bogardus jury is out. It is not probable the case will be started until next week.

LARGE CROWD OF SPECTATORS

THIS SEASON

Many Out to Watch the Horses on Broadway Speedway.

Thursday afternoon there was a number of fast steppers out on the Broadway speedway for brushes over the snow, and the spectators on the curb, who numbered more than any other day this season, saw some good action, although it did not last long.
Roan Lady, driven by her owner, William H. Wilson, was the fastest after she had been rigged with the staples. Without the rigging on, her owner sent her over the course several times against Bill Emonds' bay, Sleepy Frank, and the latter took the measure of the roan mare, sending her to a break, but after Roan Lady had been put into her racing clothes she had the speed on the Emonds horse.

One of the best heats had four speedy ones in it. Roan Lady, Sleepy Frank, Mr. Mason of Lebanon with a black mare, and Tom Mullin driving a sorrel belonging to Thomas J. Watties of Norwich Town. The race for the lead was between the Watties horse and Roan Lady, the former getting off in the lead and holding it until the final spurt, when Roan Lady drew out and finished first. Emonds, with Sleepy Frank, had a pretty struggle with the Mason horse, but came over the line ahead of the black mare.
Mr. Watties was out with another troter, but he let his sorrel do most of the brushing.

Several exciting and close finishes with the honors now this way and now that were furnished by George Mahoney with a bay trotter, and a black trotter belonging to Henry F.
Parker and driven by Jim Connell.
The Parker horse cast a shoe, and had to retire after some fast going.
George Mahoney was also out with a gray trotter that showed good speed.

According to the measurements made by Civil Engineer Pitcher several years ago when he surveyed and marked a mile up Broadway from the Broadway Congregational church, the speedway is just about a half-mile in length. The first quarter-mile mark was at the house of Miss Ripley on Broadway and the three-quarter-mile mark was at the Park church steps, this being just about the distance that is used for speeding, and by the surveyors' measurements is just about half a mile.

Red Men at New London.

Several members of Tecumseh tribe of this city attended the meeting of Nonowantuc tribe of Red Men in New London on Thursday evening, when the chief's degree was worked in fine form.
Among the Norwich men there were Sethen Howard Osborne, Rufus D.
Harris and A. E. Chandler.
